There are many "poor Jeff" comments under various YouTube videos. Those are —we're not against them—but they don't help Jeff.

Think about what would happen if...

...just 10 people made 10 fact-based comments per day under videos about Jeff that promote the official narrative (i.e., the lie). That's 100 fact-based comments per day, 700 fact-based comments per week, and 2800 comments containing the truth about Dahmer per month from just 10 people.

That's a lot of comments.

But these must be fact-based comments encouraging people to search for the truth. Look for comments from people who seem confused about the story and ask questions as these are more likely to get a response.

Direct your comments not only at others who are commenting but also at the channel owners. In some cases, these channel owners are professionals who have been duped by the fake news story.

Here's your chance to enlighten them.

If even 10% of these professionals consider your comment, it's a major win.

We have the facts. We have the truth. Now, it's just a numbers game. The more people we talk to...

Just make sure your comments "stick." YouTube automatically removes comments with links and comments containing certain words. You can check to ensure your comment hasn't been removed by going to History > Comments. If your comment was automatically removed, determine which word triggered the auto-removal and try again.

Avoid words like "subreddit", "reddit", "Substack" and even "sub". Do not post links. Instead, you can tell people things like, "Search for The Dahmer Case - A Critical Analysis across popular platforms."

Make sure your comments don't look spammy. Make them thoughtful, informative comments.

We are fighting an MSM propaganda machine that's currently losing across the board. Nobody trusts them anymore. They've lost control.

Start tomorrow!

I talked about this in front of a group of about a dozen just last week. Some asked for the link if the person I sent it to to distribute it did so, but I do talk about this to friends and at parties. Most have never heard of the information posted here.

Glad to see the Menendez brothers finally believed. I hope more people will do the same for
