Four body language and behaviour experts (Scott Rouse, Mark Bowden, Chase Hu, and Greg Hartley) are left baffled by Jeff Dahmer's body language because it doesn't match the acts he allegedly committed. In other words, Jeff Dahmer doesn't look a sound like a serial killer.

These experts were actually quite close to the truth in some respects. However, they aren't aware of what we've uncovered. They're flummoxed at Jeff's uniqueness. He's like the other violent offenders they've studied.

We know why.

Given what we've uncovered, it makes sense that things weren't adding up for the body language experts.

These guys are really good at what they do and their instincts were right. They knew something was "off". At one point (46:59), Scott Rouse says, "He's not showing this he should be showing that are congruent with what he's done. It's freaking me out

They sensed the truth. However, they believe the official narrative and this hampers their ability to completely see through the ruse. They believe the media and the government wouldn't lie to them about something like this.

Trust your intuition. If something doesn't feel right, it probably isn't. If Jeff Dahmer doesn't look and sound like a serial killer...

★ Jeffrey Dahmer's Darkness: True Crime Behavioral Analysis

These men aren't the only professionals asking questions. Forensic science experts have been very curious as to how the medical examiner assigned to the case, Dr. Jeffrey Jentzen - who has received considerable media attention because of his involvement - was able to perform identifications without the necessary tools. The following excerpt is from Anne E. Schwartz's book Monster: The True Story of the Jeffrey Dahmer Murders

...the most common question he gets from the medical professionals is how he was able to perform the identifications on the victims without all the scientific tools at the disposal of the profession today...

The case also continues to teach forensic-science professionals. Dr. Jeffrey Jentzen, the former Milwaukee County medical examiner who conducted autopsies on the remains of the victims found in Dahmer's Milwaukee apartment, is an active emeritus professor of forensic pathology at the medical school at the University of Michigan. He continues to present on his experience working the Dahmer murders and says the most common question he gets from the medical professionals is how he was able to do the identifications on the victims without all the scientific tools at the disposal of the profession today and how he was able to do it with a staff of only two people.

Dr. Jentzen was even able to identify skeletonized fingerprints. That must have been first. See The Forensic Team on the Dahmer Case Claim to Have Identified Skeletonized Fingerprints for more information.

Here's what we think really happened to Jeff Dahmer. This is why he didn't look or sound like a violent offender.

If you're wondering what happened to all that biological evidence...

Jeff Dahmer's defence attorney, Gerald Boyle, recommended disposing of it before "trial" even began in violation of a Wisconsin statute. Nobody in the courtroom that day objected. Jeff Dahmer was convicted based only on his confession. You heard it right. We found alleged victim Richard Guerrero's death certificate from 1960 but Dahmer signed a confession stating that he murdered him in 1988. Our detailed analysis of the "trial" is essential reading if you want to understand how they pulled this off.

Jeff Dahmer's Trial: An Exploration of the Peculiar Legal Process

THE DAHMER CASE • JULY 9, 2023

Jeff Dahmer's "trial" was strange. His attorney, Gerald Boyle, made decisions that a defense attorney wouldn't have made if he were defending his client.

Greg Hartley mentioned he saw seething rage in Jeff Dahmer. If it happened the way we think it happened, Jeff would have been angry with his father. VERY angry.
