Tracy Edwards was presented to the unsuspecting public as the hero who escaped a handcuff around his wrist and finally caught the "evil" Jeff Dahmer.

But who is Tracy Edwards, really?

Tracy Edwards allegedly escaped from Jeff Dahmer

In this clip from his appearance on the Phil Donahue show, we hear the truth about Tracy Edwards:

...under indictment in Tupelo, Mississippi, for sexual battery. Accused of sexually abusing year-old girl. You should also know that Mr. Edwards's charges of capital rape were dropped by the grand jury.

The term "capital" refers to a crime punishable by the death penalty:

capital offense

A capital offense is a criminal charge that is punishable by the death penalty. It is not necessary that the actual punishment imposed was the death penalty, but rather a capital offense is classified as such if the permissible punishment prescribed by the legislature for the offense is the death penalty. Although crimes punishable by death vary from state to state, generally, capital offenses include first degree murder, or murder with specific circumstances.

For example, Virginia considers "willful, deliberate, and premeditated killing" in the commission of a robbery or terrorism among many others, to be a capital offense. Florida, in addition to murder with special circumstances, provides the death penalty for capital drug trafficking.

So, Tracy Edwards was facing the death penalty, and they made him a deal. They let him back out on the streets. He later went on to participate in another murder:

Jeffrey Dahmer Hero Charged With Homicide

Tracy Edwards' survived Dahmer, but accused of throwing man off a bridge.

Nov. 2, 2011 -- A man who narrowly escaped death at the hands of serial killer Jeffrey Dahmer and led police to Dahmer's grisly house of horrors two decades ago has been arrested and charged with a homicide of his own.

Tracy Edwards was hailed as a hero on July 22, 1991 for leading police to discover Dahmer's 17 dismembered victims, ending a spree of cannibalistic homicides by one of the country's most notorious murderers.

Twenty years later almost to the day, Edwards was arrested on July 26, 2011 and accused of throwing a man to his death off a Milwaukee bridge.

If convicted, Edwards faces 60 years in prison, possibly the very same prison in which Dahmer spent his final years before he was beaten to death by a fellow inmate in 1994.

These three comments from YouTube illustrate how easy it is for the mainstream media to brainwash the public and make them think up is down and black is white. Tracy Edwards is the "hero" and Jeff Dahmer is the "serial killer":

Tracy fought hard, mentally and physically not only for his life but for countless other lives past and future, for the city, the nation, and the world. He single-handedly saved countless lives and prevented irreparable damage for countless minds and hearts that would have suffered in the future. We'll never know this side of Heaven what would have happened if Tracy had been killed.

He didn't just save his own life, he saved who knows how many more... All the love and respect for Mr. Edwards

I am crying listening to this man's testimony and seeing his pain and expression. This is so heartbreaking and horrific for him to have experienced. My heart sincerely goes out to every single one of these victims. Bless you Mr. Edwards. You're an incredible soul.
