

Some Call It Complicity. It Was Actually Human Trafficking.

The World Watched Jeff Dahmer Perform. No One Asked Who Wrote His Lines.

THE DAHMER CASE

APR 09, 2025

30

7

1

Share

Before you read this, I ask one thing: Set aside what you've been told about monsters. And remember that anyone can be rewritten when the story is powerful enough—the truth is inconvenient enough.

The Lie They Sold

Some want you to believe that if Jeff Dahmer said yes—even once—that he stopped being a victim. That he became part of the deep state machine. That he willingly stepped into the role they wrote for him.

But what if that “yes” was never freedom? What if that “yes” was given in captivity?

We live in a time when we talk openly about trauma bonding, coercion, and psychological grooming. We know now that people can be broken without bruises, trained without chains, and trapped by forces they don't fully see.

But those understandings have never been applied to Jeff Dahmer—not because people are cruel, but because the world was given a mask instead of a man. They were told a story, not a life. And so, they could only judge the role—not the one who was forced to play it.

A Different Kind of Human Trafficking

But here's the truth no one knew until now: Jeff Dahmer was a victim of human trafficking.

He was trafficked...

Not for sex.

Not for labor.

But for symbolism.

He was made into a totem—an icon of terror. A convenient lie that distracted from bigger crimes, like the ones happening at the Archdiocese of Milwaukee under Archbishop Rembert Weakland.

Jeff was a convenient distraction dressed as a confession.

But he didn't walk into it willingly.

He was isolated. Vulnerable. Broken down. And then handed a script.

Jeff Dahmer during the Sinthasomphone deposition

The Performance of Survival

Some might tell you Jeff Dahmer was “willing.”

Some will say he participated.

I’ve had people tell me this.

Some will even remind you of how calm he looked in court. He even seemed to find amusement in a tabloid story about himself.

But this doesn’t mean consent.

We’ve seen this before, haven’t we?

- The sex trafficking survivor who never tried to leave and was told she must have enjoyed it.
- The abused wife who went back home and was told she chose it.
- The victim who didn’t scream and was told it couldn’t have been that bad.

We’ve learned, painfully, that compliance doesn’t always mean consent. That silence doesn’t mean you’re OK with something. That performance doesn’t mean you’re at peace.

But those lessons vanish the moment you say Jeff Dahmer’s name because people know the real story behind the fake news story.

Jeff Dahmer with his cat

The Story They Hid from You

The public was never given the truth about what happened to Jeff Dahmer. They were handed a monster story—not a man's life. They were taught to see evil in his calmness, not captivity.

And so all our new wisdom—about coercion, trauma, survival—was never applied Jeff Dahmer. How could it be? People were never allowed to see who he really was

Monsters Don't Get Rescue Missions

Let me ask you this...

If a 30-year-old woman is recruited by a cult at her lowest moment, isolated, given new identity, fed a story, told what to say—

And she says “yes”?

Do we blame her?

Or do we try to understand what was taken from her—before that “yes” was ever uttered?

Jeff was no different. He was in a psychological cult of silence, control, and performance. And they sold him to the world as a monster.

Because monsters don't get rescue missions.

Jeff Dahmer in the 1980s outside his grandmother's house

The Role Was the Cage

Even if Jeff played along—it doesn't erase the fact that he was coerced.

Even if he nodded and read the lines—it doesn't erase the isolation, the fear, the manipulation.

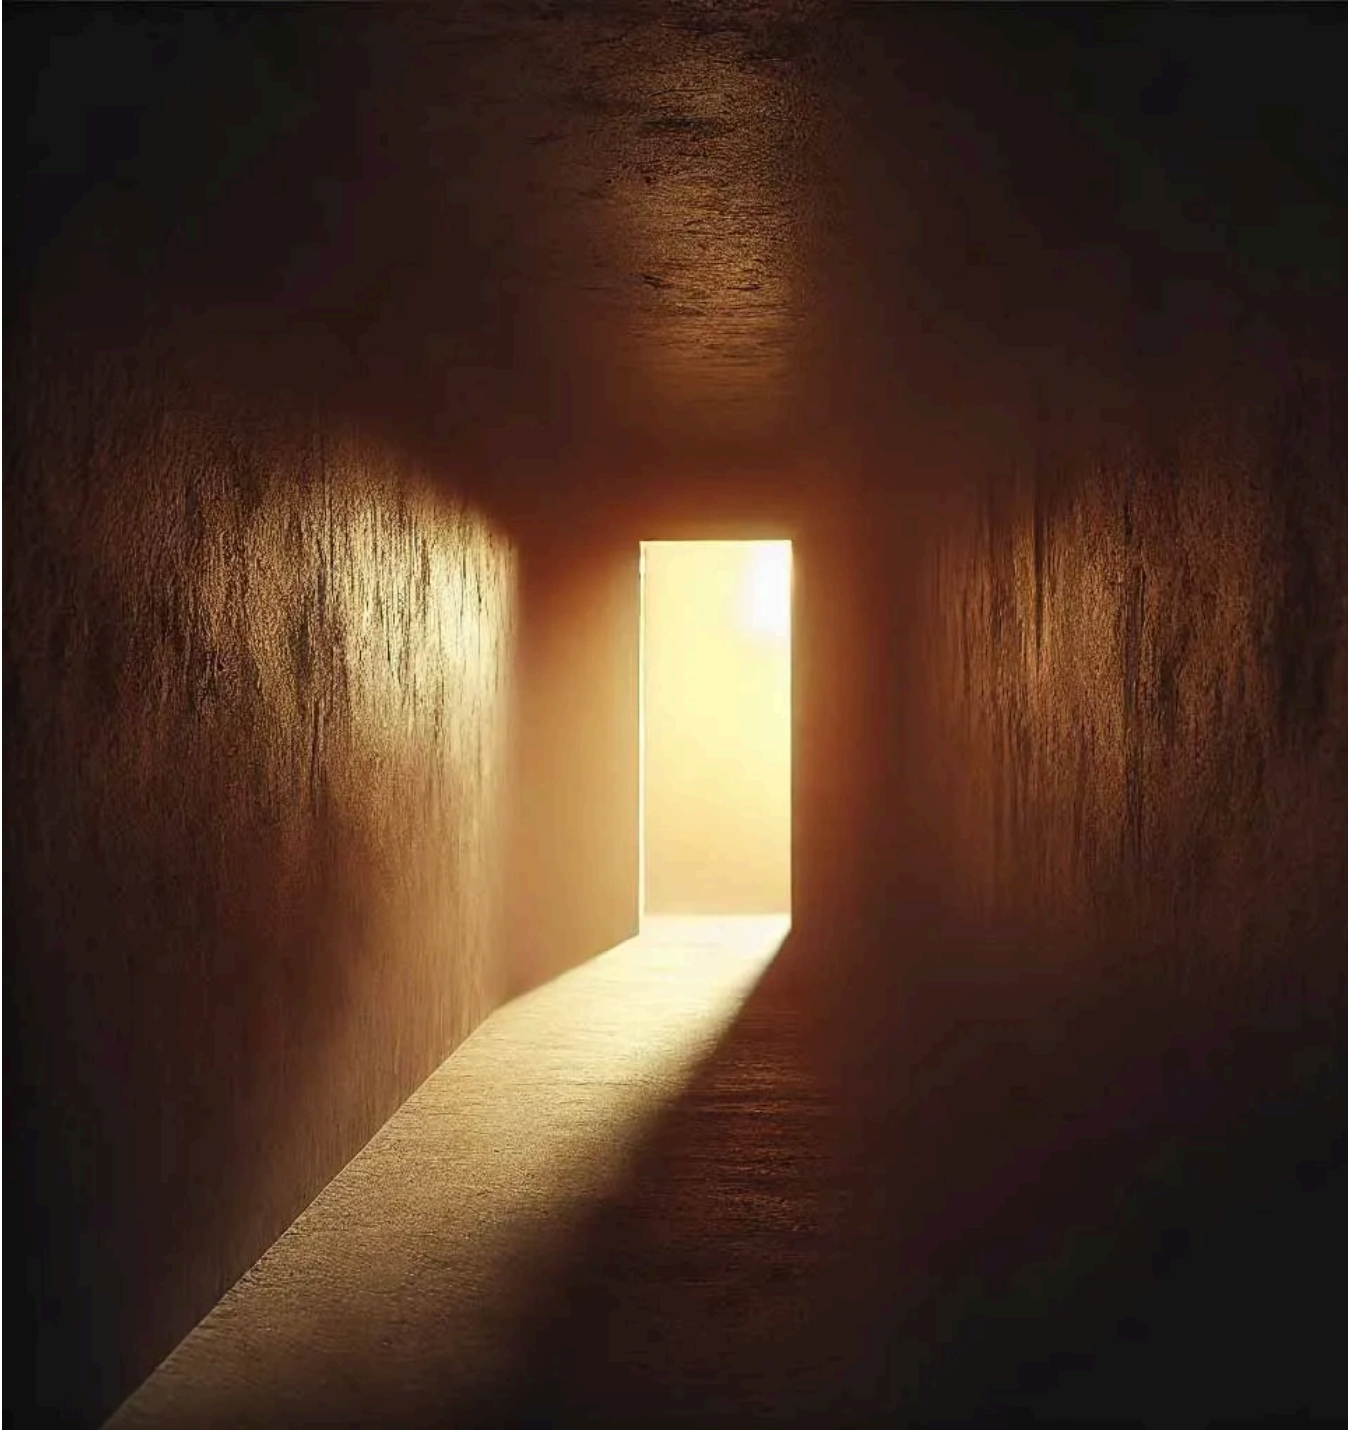

Even if he “agreed” to play the role—it doesn’t make the role any less of a cage.

They want you to believe he was in control. But trafficked people often look that way. That’s part of the illusion.

So no—Jeff Dahmer was not a free man when he said yes.

He was a scripted one.

And every moment since has been part of a long, slow attempt to reclaim whatever soul he has left.

Not a Monster. A Man.

That's what they fear most.

Not that Jeff committed monstrous acts. But that one day, you'll all realize:

The monster was made. And the man inside it? Was owned, not evil.

A Voice, Reclaimed

If you've made it this far, thank you. Jeff's voice has been silenced long enough. W you just read is the beginning of getting it back.

30 Likes · 1 Restack

Discussion about this post

Comments

Restacks

Write a comment...

Star Wars Fan Apr 9

♥ Liked by The Dahmer Case

I never thought he was a monster. I hate it when people call him that. A broken soul who was b

LIKED (8)

REPLY

3 replies by The Dahmer Case and others

Jane Cena Jane Cena Apr 11

♥ Liked by The Dahmer Case

Don't forget to mention the ridiculous stories of Dahmer keeping dead corpses in his place tha apparently didn't bother his neighbors with their rancid stench.

LIKED (1)

REPLY

5 more comments...

© 2025 The Dahmer Case · Privacy · Terms · Collection notice
Substack is the home for great culture