

What Really Happened To Jeff Dahmer?

THE DAHMER CASE

NOTE: I wrote this post several months ago. It has since been pointed out to me that kidnapping charges are automatically filed when a victim is picked up by a car. I had a kidnapping indictment but was not convicted. Therefore, whatever happened to Steven Hicks, likely happened after Jeff Dahmer picked him up with a car. There is a link at the bottom of this post to another theory that seems to match up better with what we now know about the case.

We have mugshots of an alleged victim taken years after he supposedly died, a death certificate showing that alleged victim Richard Guerrero died in 1960, and Gerald Boyle's bizarre legal decisions.

So, this is not what they told us it was. It appears to have been a show trial.

But why did Jeff participate?

Watch Jeff in his third court appearance.

We also encourage you to watch both his Inside Edition interview and the Stone Philips interview.

Does he look like a murderer and someone who was hanging out in gay bathhouse? Can you picture him doing the things they claim?

For some reason, he's going along with this. But nobody goes along with something like this willingly. So, something happened and he ended up in this tragic role.

What was it?

We have a theory.

We think Jeff might have accidentally killed Steven Hicks in 1978 with his car as he was walking alongside the road.

Jeff did have a serious problem with alcohol, so there were times when he probably behind the wheel of his father's car while intoxicated.

He was also ticketed for driving left of center on the night of June 18, 1978, the day Steven Hicks went missing:

If you go over the highway shoulder line just a little bit, you could accidentally hit someone walking on the shoulder.

Maybe that's what happened.

Fate of teen is mystery since '78

Coventry mother seeks data on son

By Dave Scott
Beacon Journal staff writer

Police receive reports of missing people daily and although families often receive bad news, the fate of those missing is usually determined given time.

So far, Steven Mark Hicks is an exception. It was June 18, 1978, when a brother dropped him off at the westbound entrance ramp to U.S. 224 at Waterloo Road to hitchhike to a rock concert at Chippewa Lake Park. That was four days before his 19th birthday. He hasn't been seen since.

His mother, Martha Steven Hicks of Coventry Township, has virtually given up hope that her son, now 26, is still alive. But she does think someone might have information about him. She is offering a $2,500 reward to anyone with information that leads to his discovery.

Mrs. Hicks said a missing persons report was made with the Summit County Sheriff's Department four days after her son's disappearance. But she said she now believes little was done by detectives.

Her son's name even was withdrawn from the national computer listing missing persons in 1979. It is unclear whether the decision was made by the National Crime Information Center or by the Summit County Sheriff's Department.

Now the name is registered again.

Mrs. Hicks had dental records sent to Chicago when authorities there discovered the mass graves of boys allegedly killed by John Wayne Gacy. No leads were discovered.

The dental records never made it back to Akron. Mrs. Hicks said she believes the records were lost by Summit deputies, but sheriff's Lt. Robert Scalise said there is no record of their ever being received in Akron.

Although she commends Scalise for his recent efforts to find her son, Mrs. Hicks believes deputies did little when the initial report was made in 1978.

Scalise said his investigation has shown the Hicks case was handled in the usual manner used in 1978. But he adds that missing persons investigations are in vogue now and get far more attention from detectives than they once did.

Disappointed by the deputies' work, Mrs. Hicks hired a Los Angeles private detective agency for $300 to investigate the disappearance. The agency also failed to find any trace of the youth.

Scalise's recent investigation has shown that Hicks never used his Social Security number, never applied for a new Ohio driver's license and never was arrested or given a traffic ticket.

Mrs. Hicks described her son as a "very friendly, outgoing" boy who would rather work on cars than study.

Although he was a passing student, he quit Coventry High School in late April, his mother said.

Mrs. Hicks admits that her son was no angel and sometimes used marijuana.

"He didn't always choose wisely in his friends," she said. "He never saw anything wrong in anybody. He could be friends with them and not judge them."

It was one of those friends who led to Hicks losing his driver's license.

According to Mrs. Hicks, her son was with another boy who made an obscene gesture at a sheriff's deputy. A chase ensued and the other boy got away. Hicks, who was on a minibike, was charged with willful fleeing and lost his license for a year.

When he was last seen, Steven Hicks was 5 feet 10 inches tall, weighed about 150 pounds, had brown hair and brown eyes. He had a burn scar on his right forearm.

He wore blue jeans and tennis shoes. The dental braces that were removed three weeks before his disappearance were hanging on a chain. He wore no shirt.

Mrs. Hicks has often heard speculation that her son ran away, but she is convinced he did not.

First she cites the lack of any evidence that he ever worked or tried to get a driver's license.

Then she tells the story about how that day also was Father's Day and the birthday of Steven's father, Richard.

He and his two brothers and sister planned to give their father a grass trimmer.

"He told them that if he was not back by 6 p.m. to go ahead and give Dad the gift," she said. "But he planned to be back by 6."

She also said Steven had several job applications and two employers called after he turned up missing.

The Hickses decided to offer the reward when they discovered complications in writing their will. With their son missing, they cannot be sure if he should be included among the heirs.

So she is hoping someone will hear of the reward and call sheriff's detectives at 379-2131, even if the news is bad.

Referring to the parents whose children are found dead, she said, "I know what those parents went through. But at least those parents got bodies back to bury. We don't."

Steven Hicks is dead, but his death isn't reported because someone covered it up

Jeff Dahmer's home on Bath Road, isolated and barely visible from the street, was a perfect place to hide a body.

But, why not report it to the police?

Maybe because someone didn't want Jeff to get in trouble and maybe that someone wasn't Jeff.

Maybe it was Lionel Dahmer, or the woman who married him in December 1978 became known as Shari Dahmer.

At this time, Lionel and Joyce Dahmer were in the middle of an acrimonious divorce and there was a restraining order against Lionel. He was not to enter the house on W Bath Road and was staying with his girlfriend, Shari, in a motel a few miles down the road. Lionel and Shari were planning to get married.

As noted above, it's well-documented that Jeff Dahmer had a drinking problem in school, and on the night of June 18, 1978, he was driving his father's car and received a ticket for driving left of center.

Jeff told the FBI that Hicks' body was in a field for three days. Maybe that's where it landed after being hit by the car Jeff was driving. Maybe Jeff didn't tell his father away about it because he was scared.

Three days later, Jeff takes his father to the place where the body landed and the scared the living daylights out of Lionel Dahmer and he made a poor decision:

"We're not going to the police. We're going to bury the body."

Or maybe Shari Dahmer didn't want this problem interfering with her upcoming wedding and didn't like the idea that her boyfriend, Lionel Dahmer, might have to spend a lot of money on an attorney for his barely 18-year-old son. (Lionel Dahmer was already spending money on a divorce.) Did she convince Lionel Dahmer to have Jeff bury the body and be done with it?

Is this why Jeff didn't have a driver's license and appears to have never driven a car again?

Jeff made enough money to buy a car and I'm sure his father would have helped him. Jeff owned an expensive laptop, but no car.

So, the years go by and Jeff feels terrible. This kind of thing will weigh heavy on your soul until you confess.

And Jeff wanted to confess, and so he did.

Perhaps he told them that his father made him do it, made him bury the body. Perhaps he simply told them that his father helped him bury Hicks' body. That would have been enough to implicate Lionel Dahmer.

Not long before the arrest neighbor Vernell Bass heard Jeff throwing things and yelling inside his apartment. Vernell said that Jeff was calling someone a "motherfucker" and that this person had made Jeff do something. Jeff said, "It's all your fucking fault."

Was Jeff yelling at his father?

So, how do we get from that to this insane "serial killer" show?

Here's a possible scenario...

Maybe after Jeff confessed to accidentally killing Steven Hicks on the night of Ju 1978 and then burying his body, they told him his father was going to go to prison along with him, and because of his age, he would probably die there.

Think about it. They had two middle class white men who would have been terrified getting a life sentence in a maximum security prison full of violent offenders.

And then maybe a group of powerful people stepped in to make them an offer:

"You can do something for us and that will keep you and your father out of prison."

And a show trial is born. We believe the Archdiocese of Milwaukee was involved

It's possible that Jeff Dahmer was in prison for 2.5 years or so and they staged the "prison murder" to get him out.

While the above is just speculation, we have carried out in-depth research and analysis into this case in the search for answers to questions raised. The findings have been encouraging. We hope that you will also find the answers you're looking for and reach your own conclusions.

For another theory about what happened to Jeff Dahmer, see What Really Happened To Jeff Dahmer? - Another Theory. This theory is even more tragic than our theory.

Jeff always said that it was an accident & then that you never forget the first one & it affects your whole life. It's possible he confessed to the Dr Lodi that he was paying.

I'm obsessed with this case for like 2 months and I can't get this out of my head like I wonder actually was real and what was fake ? If Jeffrey dahmers "death" was fake , I wonder where is and if he is alive ? Maybe somewhere where no one would recognize him or maybe he actualy died in 1994 but I don't think that's true , I'm so happy and glad that I found account like yours because something was always "off" or "weird" about this case..so many things doesn't make sense, I've seen someone who would be like " oh I don't think Jeffrey Dahmer actually did all these things something about this seems odd " and I've always thought that I'm just the only one thinking thank u for ur posts that explain so many things about this case 🙏 I hope u will post more b really interested to read about this case 🤗 (btw I'm sorry if I wrote something wrong but English is my first language 😊)
