Jeff Six, born August 1960, attended Revere High School with Jeff Dahmer and was a close friend. Despite that, most people familiar with this story have never heard of Jeff Six. Here's a photo of Jeff Six from the 1978 Revere High School yearbook:

Jeffrey Six, Jeff Dahmer's high school friend, is from Akron (Ancestry.com)

Here's what we know about Jeff Six...

He liked to hit dogs with his car, and this behavior made Jeff Dahmer sick. Dr. Fos mentioned this during the trial:

Note that as soon as the subject of Jeff Dahmer's "strange behavior" regarding animals is brought up, the conversation moves immediately to Jeff Six. Jeff Six was actually one abusing animals, not Jeff Dahmer.

This is like saying...

"I have serious problems with food. My friend Mike eats anything you put in front of his face. He can't stop."

One of Jeff Dahmer's classmates at Revere High School, John Backderf (aka Derf Backderf) mentioned Jeff Six's behavior in his comic book called My Friend Dahmer. In that book, he gave Jeff Six the name "Lloyd Figg." Here's an excerpt from the book:

Figg was regarded by all as the class psycho, far worse than Dahmer. In addition to his disruptive behavior at school, he was a heavy pot smoker and was rumored to be dealing with it. This was the main element of his "friendship" with Dahmer. They were spotted smoking together several times by Neil and others. Figg enjoyed running over animals in his car and was accused of purposely hitting several neighborhood pets. Dahmer recounts an incident where he was getting a ride with Figg, and Figg swerved to hit a small dog, a cruel act that enraged

Dahmer! Figg was argumentative and confrontational and was frequently smacked around by schoolmates, but he was so mammoth that he barely felt the blows.

Backderf continues...

I was home for break the last 3 weeks in July and the first week in August. During this break I attended a field party (bonfire and beer) in Bath with Mike and a few others. Surprisingly, Lloyd Figg showed up and, as usual, was behaving like an annoying idiot. He danced around us, babbling that he “knew a secret.” Finally, one of us said, “Okay, Figg. What secret?” But then Figg clammed up and quickly vanished. Looking back now, I wonder if he knew of the Hicks murder. Did Dahmer blurt something out? Figg was the last of the lower-caste psychos (some of whom were serious drug users) with whom Dahmer stayed in contact after high school. These friendships, if they could be called that, would all peter out by the end of the summer. Lionel insists there were “several” teenagers passed out in the living room when he first discovered in early August that Jeff was living in the family home alone and Joyce had split.

What was Jeff Six's secret?

According to the official narrative, Jeff Dahmer was a closeted homosexual who murdered Steven Hicks because Hicks wanted to leave. If he killed Hicks, he would have shared that information with anyone.

Jeff Six's sick habit was also mentioned in The Shrine of Jeffrey Dahmer by Brian Masters:

When he was sixteen, Jeff grew even further apart from his colleagues at school. Bill Henry, Greg Rogerson, they all gradually fell by the wayside. It was, of course, Jeff's own fault that this happened. He was more and more morose, sullen, uncommunicative; and more and more drunk. Schoolboys are quite impressed by the occasional display of alcoholic excess as a badge of adulthood, but constant drunkenness, though they would scarcely admit it, frightens them. Jeff Dahmer's frequent stupors made them feel insecure in his presence, and they avoided him. All except one. It was now that he made a new friend in somebody as keen to blot out the present as he was. Jeff Six was also sixteen and was one of Revere High School's suppliers of marijuana. He met Dahmer during the lunch period one day and offered him a smoke. From then on they would drink and smoke together every day, drinking 'until our noses would get numb' as Jeff Six put it, and smoking pot to transport themselves into giggly indifference. This new friendship suited Dahmer well enough, because it involved neither emotional commitment nor contact with the real world. The dope and the alcohol were a passport to unreflective bliss, and the schoolwork came virtually to a halt.

Jeff Six had one habit of which Dahmer did not approve. He loved to drive fast, and 'his big thrill was to find a dog that was walking in the road and speed up real fast and hit it. It just amazed me. In one day he went through four dogs. How many dogs just walked into the road in front of him . . . he'd speed up real fast and just tick them off. The last one was this little puppy that walked into the road and I remember it was horrible, he speeded up real fast and the dog just went flipping over the top of the hood and I looked back and I could see it running off with this terrified look in its face. I don't know how badly hurt it was, but pretty badly. That just sickened me. I told him to take me back and let me out.¹⁰

Was Jeff Six involved in what happened to Steven Hicks in 1978?

John Backderf says that when Jeff Six was pushed to tell the secret, he clammed up disappeared.

Interestingly, Jeff Six is the only friend of Jeff Dahmer who, to this day, has never said a word about Jeff. As Jeff Dahmer's closest friend, his silence raises questions.

The official narrative wants us to believe that teenage Jeff Dahmer was spending little time during the summer of 1978 sitting at home, alone and bored. However, that's unlikely. Jeff Dahmer would have been spending time with friends. That's what kids do, and Jeff Dahmer's closest friend was Jeff Six.

Could Jeff Dahmer have been in Jeff Six's car when they met Steven Hicks?

According to the official narrative, Jeff Dahmer picked up Steven Hicks on June 18, 1978, across from the firehouse, which is located at West Bath Rd, in Ohio. Jeff lived at 4480 West Bath Rd. We are told that Jeff met Steven Hicks after supposedly borrowing his father's car to go to the cinema.

Fate of teen is mystery since '78

Coventry mother seeks data on son

By Dave Scott
Beacon Journal staff writer

Police receive reports of missing people daily and although families often receive bad news, the fate of those missing is usually determined given time.

So far, Steven Mark Hicks is an exception. It was June 18, 1978, when a brother dropped him off at the westbound entrance ramp to U.S. 224 at Waterloo Road to hitchhike to a rock concert at Chippewa Lake Park.

That was four days before his 19th birthday. He hasn't been seen since.

His mother, Martha Steven Hicks of Coventry Township, has virtually given up hope that her son, now 26, is still alive. But she does think someone might have information about him. She is offering a $2,500 reward to anyone with information that leads to his discovery.

Mrs. Hicks said a missing persons report was made with the Summit County Sheriff's Department four days after her son's disappearance. But she said she now believes little was done by detectives.

Her son's name even was withdrawn from the national computer listing missing persons in 1979. It is unclear whether the decision was made by the National Crime Information Center or by the Summit County Sheriff's Department.

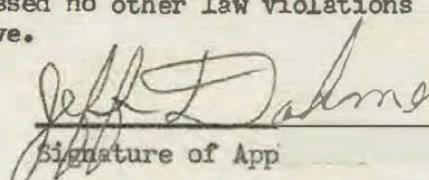

Now the name is registered again.

Mrs. Hicks had dental records sent to Chicago when authorities there discovered the mass graves of boys allegedly killed by John

See COVENTRY, page D4

Beacon Journal article reports the date Steven Hicks was last seen and where he was dropped off to hitchhike to the concert.

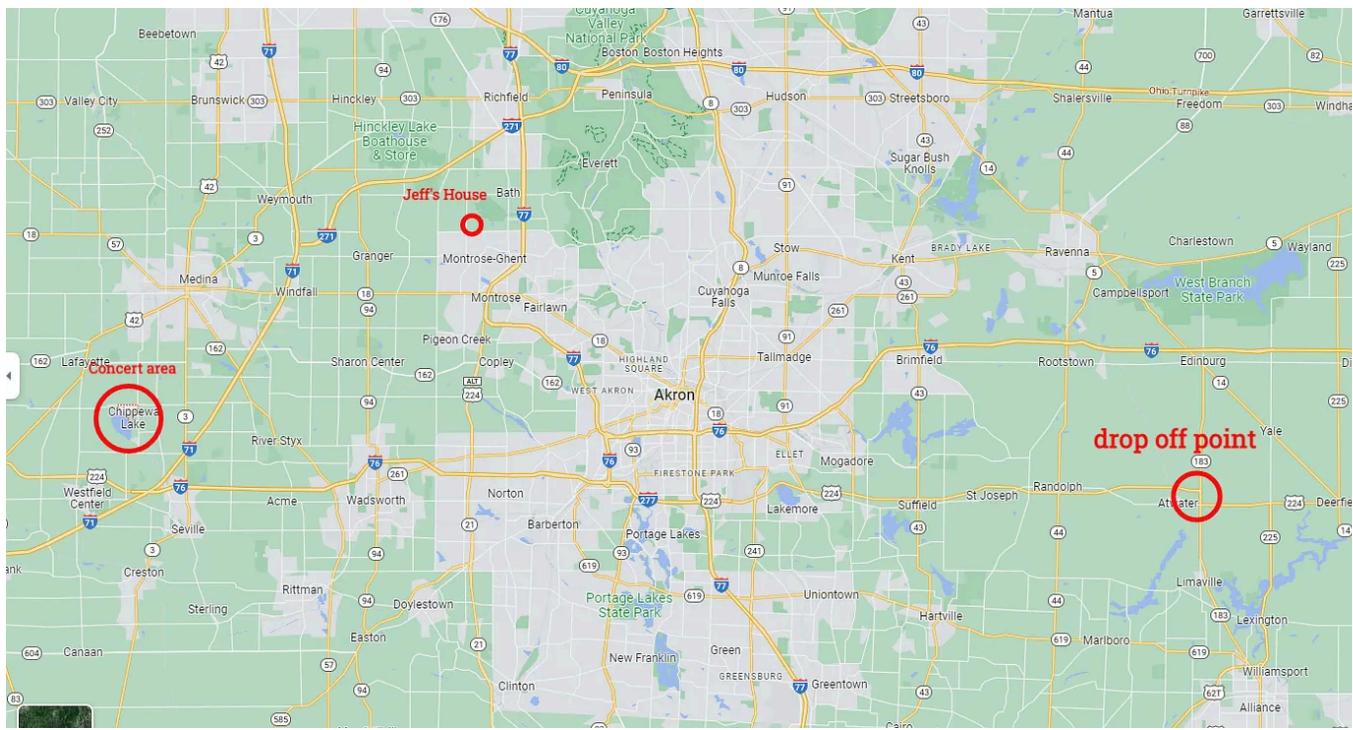

The official narrative is that Jeff was stopped that night by police for driving left of center, allegedly with Steven Hicks' body in the back seat, in trash bags. However, there's no exact date on this Army document. It just says June 1978:

According to Brian Masters in The Shrine of Jeffrey Dahmer, Jeff got the ticket for driving left of center on June 25, 1978, at 3 AM, not June 18th:

In July of 1978, the day after his parents' divorce became absolute and the day after his mother had finally fled to Wisconsin, Jeff Dahmer was fined $20 by the Traffic Court at Akron, Ohio, for having driven left of centre on 25 June at three in the morning. The last day Steven Hicks was seen alive (other than by his killer) was 18 June. His remains were not found for thirteen years.

The concert Steven Hicks was going to on June 18, 1978, was at Chippewa Lake. He was hitchhiking to the concert from the drop-off point you see on the map. Note where Jeff's house is located in relation to the drop-off point and the concert venue.

Given the location of the concert venue it's unclear how Steven ended up supposed meeting Jeff Dahmer on Highway 77 instead of 76, which he could use to get home to the concert) in a straight line.

The following is speculation...

Perhaps Jeff Dahmer and Jeff Six went to Akron to the cinema in Jeff Six's car. Ma Steven Hicks stopped at a mall in Akron on his way home from the concert. He me Jeff Dahmer and Jeff Six, and they decided to hang out together. They all went bac Jeff's house because he was there all alone. So, we have three young male teenager hanging out, drinking, smoking dope, lifting barbells, and no responsible adults around to keep an eye on things. Anything can go wrong.

We know Jeff Six had violent tendencies and that he ran over dogs with his car for Given his violent behavior toward animals, who knows what else he might be capa of.

Jeff Six has a criminal record (see screenshot below) and, according to John Backd was rumored to be a pot dealer in high school. Therefore, he could very well have problems with the police in high school because of drugs or drunk driving. If so, it not difficult to imagine his desire to cover up an accidental death.

Dr. Fosdal quoted one very interesting statement from Jeff:

First mistake that led up to all this. Had I driven past all this would not have happened.

A rather strange statement for someone who, according to the narrative, has been fantasizing about corpses and killing people since the age of 15. A person with such fantasies would have killed someone sooner or later anyway.

Jeff Dahmer also referred to what happened to Steven Hicks as a “festering sore” that never gets better and eventually ruptures:

There's a reason Six stays silent despite being a close friend of Jeff's. Did he make the suggestion to hide the evidence. Jeff always said it was an accident, 'not planned' & involved barbells. Was Six Jeff was heard shouting and swearing at Vernell, for 'making him do this'? The official story, confession and the FBI vault for instance, about what happened to Steven Hicks keeps changing. Shows we are not being told the truth.
